

A selection of 170 fashion, table and decoration pieces are part of the sample of items created by artisans from the North coast of Colombia.

In the January version of Maison & Objet 2023, Artesanías del Atlántico will have a special exhibition of decorative and fashion pieces created by artisans from the north coast of Colombia, in South America. The figures and objects created by hand, from natural fibers, with versatile, contemporary designs, are the result of a sustainable and socially responsible process.

The Artesanías del Atlántico exhibition, located in the Unique and eclectic- stand O17 pavilion, will feature a segment of designs containing different fashion accessories such as totes, baskets, backpacks and buckets, among other pieces from the 'Algarabía' and 'Carnaval' collections.

In the pieces for the table and dining room proposals, the placemats, napkin rings and sculptures stand out, with versions in raw tones and colors of the season. In this exhibition, the versatility of the materials and the richness of combining them are exalted, in a diversity of more than 12 crafting techniques. Decorative items in materials such as wood, recovered plastic, fique and iraca, are part of the craft sample exhibited at the French fair.

In this portfolio the brand shows 170 of its top seller products, full of high quality, perfect finishes and the potential to mix with different colors, textures and materials. But The most value thing ,is the story behind each product, the impact it has for the 560 artisans who benefit from the initiative that promotes the marketing of their products in different parts of the world.

Artesanías del Atlántico 's consecutive participation in Maison & Objet has made it possible to generate a greater impact in the communities through the relationship growth with commercial clients in United States, Europe, Asia and the United Arab Emirate
